Food for Free rescues gala leftovers for the hungry

Hunger. Food for Free feeds the poor with food left over from events at Harvard and other institutions.

Where does the extra food from grocery stores and large events go? Instead of letting it rot in a garbage bin, Cambridge-based Food for Free has responded to local hunger by rescuing food that would otherwise go to waste and distributing it to local emergency food programs including food pantries, youth programs, shelters and more.

Wednesday afternoon's rescue took place at Harvard's commencement ceremony, which meant prepared meals in the form of bagged lunches. These would end up in women's shelters, kid's meal programs, and other day-service meal plans. Food in bulk, like 50 pounds of vegetables, would end up at The Pine Street Inn, Rosie's Place, The Greater Boston Food Bank or to local farmers markets.

After working in the cooking industry for over 20 years, Adam Collins, 49, volunteered as a driver at Food for Free for three years before becoming a full-time driver.

"I love cooking, but after volunteering with these guys, I decided I wanted to take on a full-time role here," Collins said. "It's a very rewarding job. We get our food from all over and we take it all over."

University, 40 to 100 pounds a week from MIT and 1,000 to 2,000 pounds every week from Whole Foods Market.

Food for Free plan to expand its partnership with MIT in the fall, picking up excess food in all five of its dining halls starting in September. They also rescue from local restaurants, which Collins said was an easy pickup given his connections in the local restaurant world. While they have regular rescue partnerships with local facilities, companies will call for pickups all over the Greater Boston area.

"I've walked into places where I've known the people working and asked if there was anything they could spare for us," Collins said. "They end up saying, 'Take whatever you want, all the way down to the pots and pans.'"

Founded in 1981, Food for Free has the capacity to store up to 4,000 frozen meals and an additional 6,000 meals in its cooler for defrosting until a partnering organization, shelter or meal program can receive the food.

"My goal is to not bring any food back to our facilities," Collins said. "Unless it's a surplus that can be used the next day, the goal is to get rid of all of the food in one day."

Local food programs like Bread of Life in Malden and Lowell Transitional Housing are two examples of food service programs that take on large-scale deliveries from anywhere between 300 to 1,500 pounds serving 250 to 500 meals a day with rescued food.

"We're out here every day in a place like Cambridge, which is considered to be a well-off area, and I see people lined up at 7 a.m. at a pantry that doesn't open until noon," Collins said.

As one of the nation's first food-rescue programs, Food for Free feeds more than 25,000 families annually in Greater Boston.

Justice. 'Whitey' Bulger's assets to be distributed to victim's families

Federal prosecutors said they're preparing to distribute nearly $822,000 in assets seized from famous Southie mobster James "Whitey" Bulger to the families of victims he murdered and the people he extorted.

According to Boston.com, prosecutors filed documents in federal court on Tuesday that the money, guns, jewelry and other items of value found in Bulger's California apartment will be divvied up to the families of victims after a final forfeiture order goes through.

U.S. Attorney Carmen Ortiz's spokeswoman, Christian Dilorio-Sterling, told Boston.com that prosecutors have been moving forward to provide the funds to the families.

Bulger, 84, was sentenced to life in prison on Nov. 14 for a laundry list of charges including 11 murders, extortion and many other crimes throughout his reign of organized crime activities from the late 1950s until fleeing in 1994. He evaded authorities for 16 years and was on the FBI's Most Wanted fugitive list for 12 years.

Haverhill rapists prison-bound

Two Haverhill rapists were sentenced to prison Wednesday for separate crimes.

Sebastiao Dasilva, 51, was found guilty in Salem Superior Court of rape of a child with force, assault to rape a child, and eight counts of indecent assault and battery on a child under the age of 14.

He was sentenced to nine to 12 years in state prison and five years probation and sex offender treatment, have no unsupervised contact with children under 16 and no contact with the victim or the family.

A Lawrence Superior Court judge sentenced Jeffrey Lewis, 30, to four to six years in state prison and five years probation following his release for raping his girlfriend in 2013.

Evidence indicated that Lewis raped his girlfriend three separate times in 2013.

Boston PD seeks info on shooting of 7-year-old boy

As 7-year-old Divan Silva recovers from a gunshot wound he sustained in the area of 296 Bowdoin Street, in Dorchester, Boston Police Commissioner William Evans is pushing the community to step up and help identify the shooter.

"The 7-year-old boy injured in this incident deserves as much. He was simply riding his bike to the store," Evans said on the BPD blog. "If you have information, holding onto it only helps the suspect. And the person who shot Divan needs to be held accountable."

BPD are searching for a suspect described as a black man between the ages of 14 and 18, 5-feet-8, heavyset who wore a red hoodie, white shorts and white shoes at the time of the shooting.

State police released this photo of the drug bust haul. / MSP

State investigators hauled in more than 3,700 bags of heroin Tuesday after busting two Holyoke drug suspects.

The drug bust followed a lengthy investigation by the Massachusetts State Police and the Hampden County Narcotics Task Force.

Julio Rosado, 20, was charged with two counts of trafficking heroin/morphine/opium, and two counts of distribution of a class A substance.

Armando Vega, 27, was charged with possession with intent to distribute a class A substance (heroin), possession to distribute a class B substance (oxycodone), and trafficking heroin/morphine/opium.

Virulent strain of deadly dog flu heads east

From January through April, doggie docs have feared this moment.

A violent strain of dog flu sickened more than 1,000 dogs in and around Chicago and killed six. And then, strangely, it stalled.

The rate of new infections involving canine influenza virus

(CIV) strain H3N2 even slowed. It was a short-lived victory.

Suddenly, H3N2 was on the move, reports Fox and NJ.com, showing up in New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts.

More than 5,000 dogs have caught the virus, which is generally treatable but comes with a cough, runny nose, lack of appetite and fever.

It is not known how the H3N2 strain was introduced into Chicago, but it could have been a dog from Asia who was a carrier and did not have active symptoms, said Keith Poulsen, diagnostic and case outreach coordinator with the Wisconsin Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory.

Cook County officials have reported 1,137 cases in the Chicago area with six deaths. While an exact figure for the Midwest is not available, Poulsen believes it is less than 5,000 cases.

About 5 percent or fewer affected dogs die from the more familiar H3N8 strain — mostly older dogs or puppies. Fatalities from the new strain also are expected to be less than 10 percent of animals affected, Poulsen said. JOHN A. OSWALD

Islamic State sympathizers may have made airline threats

Islamic State sympathizers may have been behind threats in the last two days to international flights using U.S. airports or flying over American airspace, law enforcement and security sources said.

The sources said that after 11 threats were received by U.S. law enforcement officers on Monday, at least four more were phoned in late on Tuesday.

The threats were similar, and the caller claimed the flights were carrying chemical weapons, they said, adding that investigators' theory was that sympathizers of Islamic State were responsible.

Officials blame Tinder for rise in STDs

Rhode Island is freaking out because STD rates have risen. The state blames hookup apps like Tinder for having a hand in the increase.

CNN reports that "between 2013 and 2014, cases of syphilis grew by 79 percent. HIV infections were up 33 percent and gonorrhea cases increased by 30 percent. STD cases for young adults are growing at a faster rate than the rest of the population."

This isn't the first time the Internet has been blamed for aiding in the spread of sexually transmitted diseases. Craigslist was found to have helped push a 16 percent increase in HIV infections, according to a study from New York University. MATT LEE

US military mistakenly transfers live anthrax to lab

The U.S. military mistakenly sent at least one live anthrax sample to a private laboratory in Maryland and possibly sent others to eight other states, a U.S. defense official said.

The official said the samples were meant to be sent in an inactive state for research purposes and added the samples were now believed to be secure.

The Pentagon said there was no public health risk.

It was not immediately clear if anyone in those laboratories might have been exposed before learning they had live, as opposed to inactive, samples.

World soccer officials arrested over corruption

Money. FIFA collects billions of dollars in revenue, mostly from sponsorship and television rights for the World Cup.

The world's most popular sport was plunged into turmoil on Wednesday as seven powerful soccer figures were arrested on U.S. corruption charges and faced extradition from Switzerland, whose authorities also announced a criminal investigation into the awarding of the next two World Cups.

A 47-count indictment was unsealed early Wednesday morning in federal court in Brooklyn, New York, charging 14 defendants with racketeering, wire fraud and money-laundering conspiracies, among other offenses, in connection with the defendants' participation in a 24-year scheme to

A man jokes about FIFA outside the hotel Baur au Lac in Zurich, Switzerland. / GETTY IMAGES

Quoted

"As charged in the indictment, the defendants fostered a culture of corruption and greed that created an uneven playing field for the biggest sport in the world." James Comey, FBI director enrich themselves through the corruption of international soccer. The guilty pleas of four individual defendants and two corporate defendants were also unsealed.

The arrests of the senior FIFA officials in a dawn raid at a five-star Zurich hotel mark an unprecedented blow against soccer's powerful governing body. Swiss police arrested the seven officials — all from the Latin American and Caribbean region — and detained them pending extradition proceedings to the United States, which could take years if they contest the process. The Federal Office of Justice in Switzerland said that six would contest extradition, but that one person agreed to be extradited.

Separate from the U.S. investigation, Swiss prosecutors said they had opened their own criminal proceedings against unidentified people on suspicion of mismanagement and money laundering related to the awarding of rights to host the 2018 World Cup in Russia and the 2022 event in Qatar.

Not such a happy anniversary for Ben Affleck

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Ben Affleck and Jennifer Garner's 10th anniversary is just about a month away, but if these separation rumors are true, they won't be celebrating it together. "Ben and Jen are through," a source tells Radar Online. "He's told Jen that he wants the official statement to come out before their 10-year wedding anniversary on June 29." My math might be wrong, but I'm pretty sure that 10 is the tin or aluminum anniversary, not the divorce announcement anniversary. But maybe times have changed. Anyway, there's said to be a shared $150 million fortune at stake, so this should be fun.

Thank Miley Cyrus for more 'Grace and Frankie'

Ah, the power of social media. Or, more specifically, the power of Miley Cyrus' social media. Ever the influencer, the singer put out just a single tweet lauding Jane Fonda and Lily Tomlin's Netflix series "Grace and Frankie," and the results were truly impressive. "Let me say, it's so awesome to do a show on Netflix," series co-creator Marta Kauffman says. "Two and a half weeks after we launched, Miley Cyrus does a tweet about your show, and they call and say, 'We'd like to do a Season 2.' So yes, there is a Season 2. We have [Netflix boss] Ted [Sarandos] and Miley to thank." That's awesome, but is it too late to ask Cyrus to tweet something about "Happy Endings"?

Tina Fey and Amy Poehler action figures? Sure!

This might be a good time to point out that my birthday is coming up soon: Toy company Bif Bang Pow! has unveiled its 2015 Comic-Con exclusive, and it is quite awesome. The company has made action figures out of Tina Fey and Amy Poehler and given them a "Saturday Night Live" Weekend Update play set. The downside? The company only made 2,400 of the sets, and they're available for preorder so I don't foresee many still being available come July.

MS. MARVEL SHOULD GET HER OWN TV SHOW

Some people went to barbecues over the holiday weekend. Some went to the beach. I went to my local comic book store to load up on female superheroes. Okay, I went to a barbecue too, but I spent my time there talking about comic books, which will surprise no one.

I've been writing about the new crop of heroines (or new versions of older ones) for a while, but I haven't had a chance to go deep into the stories. This week I got the "Ms. Marvel" trades. Not the old Ms. Marvel. The new one: Kamala Khan, created by editors Sana Amanat and Stephen Wacker, writer G. Willow Wilson and artist Adrian Alphona. She's the first Muslim character to headline her own comic. Kamala discovers she has inhuman genes and can shape-shift. She's a fangirl, naming herself after Carol Danvers, who is now Captain Marvel. She's a teenager who's dealing with real problems. She teams up with Wolverine. With all the superhero TV shows out there, there is a big, gaping hole and Kamala Khan should be the one to fill it.

There have been rumors about one show, though they're probably untrue. There are also rumors about her showing up in the Marvel Cinematic Universe. As much as I'd love to see her on the big screen, I don't think smashing her into a superhero film with a thousand others is going to do her justice.

Kamala Khan is the new and exciting Ms. Marvel. / MARVEL

In Ms. Marvel, we have a superhero similar in many ways to Peter Parker. She's dealing with the things we're all dealing with: sibling rivalry, parental issues, boys, her appearance, being different. I guess that's part of the reason I want to see her on the small screen more than someone like Supergirl. I mean, she's great. She's also a stunning blonde alien with superpowers who totally fits in. Awkward job or not, she's not that relatable. Kamala Khan is.

Marvel has a great crop of shows out there. "Daredevil" absolutely blew my mind. "A.K.A. Jessica Jones" is promising to be just as amazing. "Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D." came back from its slump and now has scores of loyal fans. We have dark and gritty. We have dark and fascinating. I'm happy with all of it. I just wouldn't mind seeing something different. Someone with a little light. Someone more like the rest of us. Now, who should we cast?

David Oyelowo is putting on a one man show

Interview. The "Selma" actor has a pretty unusual movie coming to HBO this Friday.

While David Oyelowo might be best known for his performance as Martin Luther King Jr. in the civil rights drama "Selma," by the time he filmed his breakthrough role he'd already completed work on "Nightingale." The movie, which stars only him, tells the story of the deteriorating mental state of a vet named Peter Snowden as he tries to keep his life together. Oyelowo is virtually unrecognizable as the same performer who played Dr. King — the only parallel between the movies is that they're both produced by Brad Pitt's production company, Plan B.

The film feels like a play, in that it's a one-man show. Did that have any impact on how you worked on it?

I did learn it like a great big monologue. I didn't do what you may otherwise do, which is that you learn your lines for any given scene a couple of days before you actually shoot it. I felt that the level of immersion that I would want to subject myself to in playing this character would mean that I didn't really want to be in the head space of technically learning lines whilst shooting. But the rest of the experience was that of a

Famous friends

Colleagues

This is the second time you've worked with Brad Pitt, who also produced "Selma." Are you drawn to similar types of projects?

It's funny, because we've now had two projects together, but actually my friendship with him is very much linked to us being dads with lots of children. He has six, I have four, and we get together every now and again and watch our children tear the place up. But yes, we worked together on "Selma," and "Nightingale" was born out of that. While I was doing "Selma," we had already shot "Nightingale" and I showed the film to Dede Gardner and Jeremy Kleiner, who run Brad's company Plan B. ... They saw it, showed it to Brad, and I remember him saying, my goodness, what a thing to go from Dr. King to Peter Snowden. His connection with "Nightingale" was very much from an actor's point of view. I think he was very interested in an actor putting [himself] through that exercise.

filmmaking one in terms of the nature of the way we shot it. Because it's very intimate in the way that theater can't be. He's expressing very dark thoughts at times, right up close into the camera.

Did you alter your acting at all, since it's just you?

It was just doing what felt right and true for playing this particular role. I don't think we did anything that was technically different than what you would do in any other given film, but because of who he is, the way he expresses himself, the fact that this is a guy who will happily have a conversation with a three-way mirror, means that the realms of the orthodox ways of shooting a film or interacting with another character are out of the window. So you're doing whatever feels truthful given Peter Snowden's circumstances.

We'd be remiss if we didn't mention the city's current burger obsession. The chain has a few locations in the Boston area for you to choose from, and you can even bring your vegetarian friends — there's a mushroom burger option. But for the meat eaters, you can't go wrong with the classics. And since you're there, you'd probably better get a milkshake too, right?

Uburger is currently entangled in the ongoing debate about the best burgers in our fair city. Is it them, is it Shake Shack, is it Five Guys? Regardless of where your vote goes in this epic battle, you probably won't leave Uburger unsatisfied. Try the Big Papi burger, which comes with jalapeños, guacamole and chipotle sauce. Or you could take their name at face value, and craft a "you" burger.

Bastille Kitchen

While Bastille Kitchen may not really be known as a hamburger place, we're not going to turn down a burger that has blue cheese, onion strings and bacon jam. Plus, if you want go a little adventurous with your meal's accompaniment, you can try the escargot on their menu. Just don't tell the French what you're mixing your fancy snails with — we think they might be offended.

Soak up the rays with Ingrid Michaelson

The singer is a big fan of outdoor concerts.

LISA WEIDENFELD
@LisaWeidenfeld
lisa.weidenfeld@metro.us

Ingrid Michaelson can't wait to get outside. The singer is embarking on a special Summer Night Out tour, playing plenty of outdoor venues, before focusing on her next album. "I wanted to do a big blowout tour for the record because after June, I'm going to hunker down and finish my next record, which is coming out next year. So I wanted to do a big send-off," Michaelson explains. Of course, playing outside does come with its own set of challenges. "If the weather's bad, it changes dramatically," she says. "We've had some crazy weather. I've had bugs fly into my face. You can't really recover from that gracefully. We've had rain that's coming almost directly horizontally at us, and all of our gear is wet, and we're just like, 'This cannot be safe.' But I'm hoping that that's not going to happen."

Open air adventures

Aside from the occasional insect-related issue ("One time, there was this gigantic bee that flew into my face. I just screamed. It was very unladylike," Michaelson shares with a laugh), being outdoors for a show is just as fun for the performers as it is for the audience.

"It's really beautiful," Michaelson says. "There's something kind of perfect about playing outside. It's very freeing. There's no walls, so you don't feel caged. It's just very open."

And for her next act

As to that new album, Michaelson says she's keeping it collaborative, much like she did with last year's "Lights Out." "I had such a great time writing the last record," she says. "Not that I want to emulate that exactly, because you can't ever do that, but I just had such a great experience that I came back. And I'm working with more writers."

While Michaelson's music is filling bigger stages, she says she's still focused on giving her fans an intimate experience. "While we are stepping things up, and it is going to be a bigger sound and a bigger production in general, I do want to have the moments where it feels like just me onstage with the audience because that's really the way I got my start, just me and an audience. So it's important for me to keep that feeling," she says.

"It's very possible. If you have the right rapport and the right audience, you can make anything feel like you're in a living room."

Comedic co-stars

Michaelson's video for "Time Machine" has been a hit, no doubt because it featured a series of comedians, including Rainn Wilson and Donald Faison, getting in Michaelson's way while she tried to sing. "I had this idea of having all these male comedians upstaging me. And my manager and I have a connection to Rainn Wilson's company, Soul Pancake, and we pitched them to help out," she says. "Rainn helped me to get a lot of people, and it just kind of came together. It was a very fun video to do."

We're not the first to point out that "Weird Al" Yankovic continues to have a viable career while many of the artists he's parodied since the '80s have fallen into obscurity — be honest, do you have any idea what Coolio is up to right now? His most recent record, "Mandatory Fun," has been heralded as a late-career gem.

Of the many bands to find success when emo went mainstream, The Early November were among the most ambitious. Their three-disc concept album, "The Mother, the Mechanic and the Path," proved such an exhausting project, it led to a four-year hiatus. Their latest, "Imbue," dropped this month.

This 1975 documentary looked inside the life of a wealthy, reclusive and rather eccentric mother-daughter pair in Long Island's Hamptons. Their estate, Grey Gardens, had fallen into disrepair, overrun by raccoons, and the women were living in squalor. It was hard to believe it was real, and not hallucinated by a slap-happy Tennessee Williams — but it was most definitely real.

A cruise to Belize offers not just a lovely dose of Caribbean sunshine but a chance to see some spectacular natural and ancient sights.

Belize, which is located next to Guatemala and Mexico on the Caribbean Sea, offers a mix of thick green jungle and white sand beaches. But there are plenty of draws that set this particular country apart from the destinations that are most likely to make up the rest of any Caribbean cruise itinerary.

Here, the lush forest — much of it protected by the environmentally conscious government — is filled with fascinating wildlife like howler monkeys and even colorful (yet elusive) toucans. There are a variety of ways to explore these deep woods, from zipline canopy tours to tubing down rivers, guided boat tours and hikes. There are also various types of iguanas and crocodiles and enough bird species to keep bird watchers content with a pair of binoculars for as long as they're in town. Belize is home to several animal sanctuaries that could be worth a visit as well, and they tend to focus on a single type of animal, such as monkeys or birds.

The coral reef just off Belize's coastline is as much, if not more, of a draw as the country's jungle landscape. Home to the second-longest reef in the world (right after the Great Barrier Reef in Australia), it's no surprise that diving down into the underwater, otherworldly network of caves and snorkeling are popular pastimes here. Don a mask and fins, and you can look for fish, turtles and colorful coral.

Where to go

Western Caribbean cruise itineraries often call on Belize City, and this common port is a jumping-off point for a variety of different sites including a variety of Mayan ruins.

- Altun Ha: This former Mayan city, about 30 minutes north of the port, contains stone ruins and temple pyramids.
- Lamanai: The name means "submerged crocodile" and the Temple of the Jaguar Masks here is surrounded by legend. Many copper artifacts were recovered here.
- Xunantunich: Located 80 miles west of Belize City, near the Guatemala border, this site functioned as a ceremonial place for the Maya. It's said to be haunted by the ghost of a woman.

aspects of Belize compared to other countries in this part of the world is that off its coast are tiny islands called cayes, a bit like the motu in French Polynesia. Most are uninhabited, and sun worshippers go there to swim in the clear blue water and lie on the sparkling sugar-white sand. Whatever you decide to see, you will most likely have the option of booking through the cruise line or on your own through an independent tour operator. Be sure to compare pricing and what's included. And, if your tour includes lunch, look for options that offer grilled local lobsters or the sweet fish that swim off the reef.

Doo-wopping Wildwoods

The Doo Wop Experience Museum and Neon Sign Garden

Echoes of the Ink Spots, the glow of neon and "Jetsons"-style motels make the Wildwoods, New Jersey, a lively, living museum of the doo-wop era.

Visiting the Wildwoods is a trip in the Wayback Machine. In the '50s and '60s, the fantasy-themed hotels, garish color palettes and unabashedly kitschy decor identified the trendiest beach resorts. It was called doo-wop, a vocal trend in popular music of the time.

When that fad ended, other towns replaced the unique motels and quirky street life with dull, homogenous buildings and lights. The Wildwoods, though, declared them historic landmarks, and it now has the largest concentration of doo-wop-era motels in the nation, with the colorful neon signs lending the streets a carnival air at night. Encouraged by the Doo Wop Preservation League, newer buildings run with the theme, creating a "Neo Doo-Wop" architecture.

The Doo Wop Experience Museum and Neon Sign Garden tells the resort's backstory and houses salvaged signs and '50s-era artifacts like dinette sets and boomerang tables. The outside garden has a collection of fully restored neon signs. The hour-long '50s Neon Night Tour travels through the unique architectural landscape on Tuesday and Thursday nights. Purchase tickets ($12 for adults/$6 for kids) at the museum.

Two doo-wop motels to try are the Caribbean (CaribbeanMotel.com) and the Starlux (TheStarlux.com). A member of the prestigious Historic Hotels of America, the Caribbean has 1950s decor with 21st-century amenities. The Starlux also has that '50s feel and two restored Airstream trailers, if you want to experience retro RVing.

The Doo Wop Diner on the Boardwalk (Doo-WopDiner.com), Marvis Diner (MarvisDiner.com) and the Star

Diner Cafe (StarDinerCafe.com) are "period-appropriate." At Cool Scoops Ice Cream Parlor (CoolScoops.com), you can put a quarter in the jukebox and sip your malt while sitting in a '57 Ford Fairlane or Chevy Bel Air.

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20
Make your health a priority. Get fit and begin a routine that promises good results. A challenge will make you look good.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22
Take some "me" time to pamper and play. Family or workplace woes should be put on the back burner. Put effort and money into something you enjoy doing.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22
Diplomacy will be necessary when dealing with moody individuals. Make positive suggestions. If you avoid being critical or demanding, you will get your way in the end.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22
Show everyone how valuable you are by going the extra mile. Helping your colleagues or making suggestions will show your dedication and put you on the fast track for a raise or promotion.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22
Spruce up your surroundings. Getting involved in home improvement or other projects will lower your stress and add to your comfort. Host a party to show off your accomplishments.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21
Enroll in a seminar that will improve your job prospects. The more you invest in your skills, the better the payoff will be. Don't be content with less than what you deserve.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21
Money is headed your way, but that doesn't mean you should go on a spending spree. Check out the best way to make your cash work for you. Invest wisely.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20
Listen and learn. Helpful advice will enable you to deal with a pressing personal problem. Emotional issues may be overwhelming, but gambling is not the answer.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18
Imagination, inspiration and romance are the order of the day. Secure your relationship with someone you love by planning a fun-filled, entertaining activity that will bring you closer together.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20
Don't pass up a good deal because of lack of funds. Your services and advice are worth sharing, and will help you take advantage of a timely offer.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20
Quibbling with those who don't see your vision will be a waste of time. Go with the flow, but keep your goals a secret. Your success will give you the final word.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21
An unusual proposition will point the way to a lucrative professional move. The time is right to try something new. You have what it takes to get ahead.

Letters to the editor

The whole picture

Re: 'People are safer when they see cops as allies, not enemies' (Metro, May 27) Mr. Giarratani's opinion on seeing police as allies fell far short of explaining the whole picture of violence. Many police are honest and sincerely desire the safety of the communities they work in, but when some do not, we cannot condone or excuse them. We pay police to protect us, we don't pay criminals, and so police must be held to a higher standard. And when someone dies in their custody, that IS something that must be rectified. The fact that it so often hasn't is one of the reasons for rioting. Secondly, the biggest issue impacting the safety of communities is gun violence. Yet every time anyone mentions gun reform, it stirs such fear-based rhetoric from the NRA, politicians, etc., that no meaningful discussion can take place. It is not fair to police, and it is not fair to violent communities to ignore the impact that guns have on safety. Furthermore, the narrative that "everything was better in the '50s" is simply not true. Black people were still being lynched — while policemen and others watched! The idyllic picture that is painted by many people about those times ignores the experiences of minorities. Watch "Selma" for a picture of "the good old days" from a perspective different than your own, Mr. Giarratani.

FMR. SSGT ANNIE FERRIS (ARNG)

Sgt. Sal Giarratani is absolutely correct in that society requires law enforcement and that society is safer when the police are viewed and respected as allies. The problem, however, is that after over 50 years of steady abuse of power by the police forces as a whole the shine of the badge is tarnished. This also relates to why the outcry over the deaths by cops are such a big deal; the police are supposed to protect and serve the public, not harass and execute them. When the police can keep their own house clean and cops are as accountable to the law as civilians, respect and goodwill will return to the badge. D. BROWN, VIA EMAIL

SPEED STILL WINS IN FANTASY WORLD

In poker, we shouldn't be trying to get good hands — we should be trying to win pots. In a category game like fantasy baseball, we shouldn't be trying to assemble the team with the best players — we should be trying to score more points than our opponents.

That line of thinking is a bit counterintuitive, but it's the best way to approach these strategy games because we eliminate some of the luck involved. With that in mind, the steals category in baseball is one worth attacking, just like we attack blocks in fantasy basketball. Since so few players are prolific in the category (only 15 players had 30-plus steals last year), we can make huge gains by sacrificing the power stats to get some cheap speed.

Spang the monkey

Cory Spangenberg has a lot going for him. The 24-year-old was the 10th overall pick in the 2011 draft. He stole 104 bases in 374 minor league games, and he's eligible at three positions in most leagues (OF, 2B, 3B). By forming a platoon with both Jedd Gyorko and Will Middlebrooks, he's getting the starting nod nearly every day. The best part of it all is Spangenberg likely comes for free off your waiver wire.

Fantasy basketball

A look at where the upcoming NBA Draft's top talent should land:

- No. 1 Timberwolves: Nikola Pekovic can't stay healthy. Likely pick Karl-Anthony Towns will have a lot on his plate early.
- No. 2 Lakers: The frontcourt of the future for L.A. should be polished low-post scorer Jahlil Okafor and Julius Randle.
- No. 3 76ers: Combo guard D'Angelo Russell would go nuts as the only real talent in Philadelphia's backcourt.

Progression toward the mean

Ben Revere is still only hitting .264 on the year, which means he's only swiped nine bags. You have to get on first before you can steal. However, this is a guy that hasn't hit less than .294 in any of his last three seasons and has been at .305 and .306 in his two previous years with the Phillies. As his on-base percentage rises toward a career norm of .323, he'll get toward his usual 35-45 steals. That means Revere, a nice buy-low candidate, projects for something around 30 steals the rest of the way.

A Billy in Oakland

Billy Burns is baseball's best base stealer you've probably never heard of. He nabbed 179 bases in 385 minor league games and did it at an eye-opening 89 percent clip. Ever since the Athletics released Cody Ross on May 3, Burns has basically been an everyday player and has seven steals in 94 plate appearances. It's not a fluke, and he's not going to slow down.

MLB. Sox back in a funk as Porcello is rocked

Two weeks ago, Rick Porcello looked as though he was emerging as the — pause for dirty word — “ace” of the Red Sox. After working 6 and 2/3 innings in a 4-2 road win over the Mariners, and having allowed just five earned runs in three May starts up to that point, the lanky righty was cruising. But after giving up six earned runs in yesterday's 6-4 loss to the Twins, Porcello could be in the early stages of a slump.

He gave up seven earned runs in just 4 and 1/3 innings six days ago against the Angels, so he's now allowed 13 runs in his past 11 and 1/3 innings pitched.

Porcello's poor outing ruined Dustin Pedroia's big day at the dish, as the second baseman belted a pair of two-run home runs — accounting for all four of Boston's runs.

With the loss, the Sox were swept by the Twins, and they have now lost six of their last eight.

Boston starts a series with the Rangers in Texas tonight (8 p.m., NESN).

NBA

Love again a strong option for Celtics

Like the rest of us, the Celtics are watching the remainder of the 2015 NBA playoffs from the couch. It was a fun regular season, but they simply lost to a much better Cleveland Cavaliers team in the first round. In fact, the Cavs were so good that they now represent the Eastern Conference in the NBA Finals.

Who can they thank? None other than LeBron James – he'll be the first to tell you that. Kyrie Irving also played a huge role, and Tristan Thompson perhaps more than anybody else on the Cavs has really shown his worth.

Not mentioned? Kevin Love. Love can thank Kelly Olynyk for ending his postseason early, an accident with an unfortunate outcome. But Love had an up-and-down season up to that point, his first with the Cavs. He looked like a square peg in a round hole on numerous occasions, and found himself on the bench in key situations – not to mention out of James' postseason pictures.

And here's something else we learned: Perhaps Love wasn't really needed on the Cavs. They did, after all, eliminate the Bulls and Hawks without him to reach the NBA Finals.

Love was already known as

a relatively poor defender, and he did nothing to change that perception this season.

So what does that mean for his value? Could Love's season in Cleveland actually hurt his appeal to a team like the Celtics?

The fact is, it shouldn't change anything.

First of all, the Celtics are not the Cavaliers. They don't have a LeBron James or a Kyrie Irving. They have a group of young, hard-working players, but no All-Stars (though a couple players might have a shot down the road). If Love were to sign with the Celtics, he would become the team's best player and, yes, they would become a better team. There is no question as

By the numbers

16.4

Kevin Love averaged 16.4 points per game in his first season in Cleveland. No longer the main offensive threat, it was Love's lowest points per game total since his second year in the league.

to whether or not he "fits," because as of right now there's nobody on this Celtics team he needs to fit around. Love, along with Isaiah Thomas, is a little sketchy defensively, but a solid start nonetheless.

As far as title contenders go, the Celtics most resembled the Atlanta Hawks this season. But as we saw in the East Finals, that blueprint wasn't an overwhelming success – if one part of the machine falters or breaks, the whole thing shuts down.

The Celtics need a star player to build around, and they're in no position to be picky about who it is if one becomes available. Is Love the best free agent this offseason? No. Marc Gasol and LaMarcus Aldridge are better players – and DeAndre Jordan would also fill a huge need.

But Love might be the most obtainable for Boston, and for that reason they should and most likely will put a call in to him at 12:01 a.m. on July 1.
